

RAILROAD WATCHMAN KILLED

Great Neck People Demand Abolition of Dangerous Grade Crossing.

The Public Service Commission and the Long Island Railroad were served with petitions to-day from the citizens' associations of Great Neck to abolish the grade crossings at Great Neck station. The fourth casualty in a few years occurred there last night when Charles Mainwaring, sixty years old, a railroad watchman, was killed by a westbound train in the presence of scores of homebound commuters. Mainwaring had crossed behind an incoming train and walked directly in front of the train which killed him.

The village associations, remembering the deaths of the son of Gen. Fitzgerald and of Mr. O'Connell and the maiming of Miss Hunt at the same crossing, demand that, pending the change of grade, automatic gates be installed to prevent further accidents.
